DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Ott et al. (U.S. Patent No. 2002/0150093).

Ott teaches a method for routing data through a network that includes, receiving data packets having header information [0037], an input port for receiving packets [0081], a packet filtering device for routing the packets [0083], a load manager for performing load balancing [0087], and a route lookup operation for determining where to route the packets [0040].

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 2-3 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Ott in view of Chow et al. (U.S. Patent Publication No. 2002/0126672).

Ott teaches all of the above described features, but is silent regarding using an ASIC chip and performing a traffic analysis metric such as counting. Chow teaches a packet classifier that handles switching/routing of packets and includes operations similar to Ott like packet filtering [0042]. Chow further teaches the use of an ASIC chip [0052] in the router, and also teaches packet counting as a policy action for managing packet data flow.

Motivation to combine these two references is evident from the common procedures they share (i.e. load balancing of data packets) and is further evident from the foundational goals described in the background portions of their respective specifications. For instance, Ott teaches a content based routing mechanism used to classify data and route requested data more efficiently [0006]. Similarly, Chow teaches a packet classification system that provides a customer with a more efficient searching mechanism for locating data [0015]. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have combined these two references to arrive at the features described in claims 2 and 3.
